Basketball program set

PAHOKEE — Some fast action at the Tuesday night city commission meeting got a summer recreation program off and running — and fast on the basketball court.

Commissioners, with the exception of President Billy McKinstry, arriving late for the meeting found the council chamber filled with young athletes there to petition city help in gaining access to the Paahokee Junior-Senior High School gym.

Serving as spokesman for the high school and college students who told councilmen the group had obtained permission to use the school basketball court five nights a week during the summer, subject to the city's providing a program director.

Before the councilmen arrived McKinstry told the young men that no action was possible without a quorum and that there would not be a scheduled session for another two weeks. The group then approached City Attorney Michael Stauder to learn the procedure for calling the council session.

On learning that the mayor could call a special session on 24 hours notice, the youths determined to contact Mayor Jim May and return Thursday night.

At that point the mayor and commissioners made their entrance and as the first order of business appointed Jones director of a salary of $150 an hour to supervise basketball for four weeks, starting Monday through Friday, for up to six weeks.

Also appearing before council was Randy Mills, director of the Paahokee High School Activities, who came to join a meeting of the two boards to negotiate terms for collecting garbage at the Padgett Island and Fremd Village housing units.

Keys said the body was received about two hours later by Patrolman Dan Crist of the Belle Glade Police Department.

Commissioners will meet with Authority members at 3 p.m. Friday to discuss terms.

Stauder, who serves as legal counsel to both bodies, said he would have to obtain an opinion from the Florida Bar Association on whether he could represent both sides in negotiations. "I said he doubted that it would be a conflict of interests and he responded that it was permissible," he said.

Both the commissioners and P-HA have agreed to obtain other counselors if Stauder has to step aside.

In other business, commissioners heard a report from engineer J.R. Sloane that it would be necessary to seek funding through politicians for expanding the solid waste facility, adding another chamber and chemical system for the water treatment plant.

After a final reading and with no public opposition expressed, the ordinance was passed which will allow solid waste collection at a city's public place instead of the 100 yards which the state imposed during an election when there is no relevant city ordinance.

PUCKERED UP for his best effort, this youngster was one of several entered in the annual seed spitting contest Saturday at the Freedom Festival in Paahokee. The target was a drawing of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

adding Sanders shouldn't let the matter drop; that he should contact City Attorney John Baker because the agreement directly affected land which had been owned by the city.

Sanders said he would confer with Baker about the problem.

The agreement between the city and the WMD was first broached up in 1973 during a meeting between city, WMD and U.S. Corps of Engineers officials. The Corps and WMD were planning the raising of Lake Okeechobee from 15.5 feet above sea level at that time to 17.5 feet in 1977.

The city owned the property occupied by the marina and recreation area and the WMD offered, in return for title to the area, to expand the marina and recreation area, build a new pavilion in the new area, build a new boat ramp there and then raise the level of the old pavilion and boat ramp and level it to the city for $1 a year.

The entire project was originally estimated at $1.5 million and the price has escalated over the years.

Youth drowns

BELLE GLADE — A 14-year old fisherman drowned Saturday when his line snagged in the waters of the Rim Canal at the Marina and he attempted to retrieve it.

The body of Clifford Walker of #30 Osceola Center was finally recovered at 8 p.m. Sunday after divers from the Sheriff's Office and the Belle Glade Police Department attempted to find it Saturday when the youth went into the water at 40 p.m.

Detective J.R. Eberle of the Belle Glade Police Department said Walker was fishing with James and Johnnie Emory of #30 Osceola Center when the youth went into the water at 40 p.m.

Emory notified the Police Department and divers, including Rick Radford of the Sheriff's Office, David Goodlett, a Police Auxiliary Officer, Detective John Carney and Patrolman Dan Crist, searched the water until dark.

Eberle said he took over the organization of the search Saturday morning at 8 a.m. The same divers showed up for the search then and five boats joined in the effort, including the Sheriff's Office Harbor Patrol boat and a Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission boat, and more by Officer Mullins.

"We looked until 2:30," Eberle said, "until the divers could say they had found nothing."

At 8 p.m., he said an unidentified diver found Walker's body floating some 200 yards from where the search centered. He notified the Police Department and Carney and Patrolman Terry Woods went to retrieve it.

Paraplegic drowns

SOUTH BAY — The Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office released Wednesday morning the name of a paraplegic who drowned when his wheelchair slipped into the New Miami River about one mile south of town on US 27 Monday afternoon.

Detective Ted Keys said the dead man was Norman Floyd, 55, of Tampa. Keys said Floyd was traveling with his nephew to West Palm Beach and had stopped to use the restroom by the side of the road at a bridge about half a mile south of the Okeelanta Sugar Mill gate.

Keys said Floyd was crossing the bridge when his wheelchair slipped into the river on the bridge road. He said the nephew attempted to reach Floyd but was unsuccessful.

Keys said the body was recovered about two hours later by Patrolman Dan Crist of the Belle Glade Police Department.

Mrs. Peavy has been attempting to finance the center, designed to have 107 beds, through various agencies and Harrelle said the center would fit well into the type of projects HUD encourages under the UDAG program.

One of the best things about the nursing center project, Harrelle said, is that the city could get a UDAG grant, loan the money to Mrs. Peavy on a long term, low interest basis and, as she pays the money back to the city, use it for other useful projects.

BJC plans EKG course

BELLE GLADE — Area nurses, EMT's and paramedics are being urged to enroll in a basic EKG course to begin Saturday, July 26, at the Palm Beach Junior College Glades campus.

Sessions will be held July 26, Aug. 2, 9 and 16 from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. for a total of 8 contact hours. The instructor is Thelma Scholl. Fee for the course is $28.

For additional information call 305-996-3055.

Harvin stressed the fact the nursing home is only one possible project the city could concentrate on and said three HUD officials who are supposed to be experts in UDAG grants have offered to come to Belle Glade to help draw up the application.

The commissioners directed Harvin to contact the HUD officials and get back to the commission to set up a meeting. He said the meeting could probably be set up for sometime within the next 30 days.

Harvin had told the commission earlier that while there had been a cap on how large the UDAG grants could be, that cap has now been lifted and officials have said the city could write a project for $20 million or $40 million.

City's Fifth Street repair project is a step closer

BELLE GLADE — A project designed to do street repair and maintenance of sidewalks, curbs and gutters on west Fifth Street came a step closer during a Monday night city commission workshop but the scope of the project was broadened from six to four blocks.

The project, which was originally funded in the 1978-80 budget at $162,000, was first meant to include both Fifth and Sixth Streets from Southwest Avenue E to Canal Street.

Rapidly inflating prices, however, caused the commission several months ago to top Sixth Street work from that year's budget and transfer $62,000 to a needed relocation fund.

After the city twice advertised for bids, the lowest bid, Rubin Construction Company, the city would apply for any of a number of possible types of projects. Harvin had supplied the commission a list of projects already awarded which included such things as cities financing commercial ventures which would supply jobs to the city, low income housing and day care centers.

The work is to be done as part of the city's Community Development program.

CD Director Remar Harvin also discussed another possible CD project, under the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD)'s Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG).

The city would apply for any of the occasions to answer the bid both times at a price of $155,000, the commission decided Monday to drop the project from Canal Street to Avenue C Place and do the work between Avenue C Place and Canal Street for $162,000.

The work is to be done as part of the city's Community Development program.

Two airplanes crash

Two light airplanes crashed in the Glades Tuesday and the pilot of one was trapped for several hours before help arrived.

Two men were found dead in a nearby farm house while the other pilot escaped without injuries.

Jack DeVoe, 37, of Coral Gables, was listed in fair condition in Everglades Memorial Hospital after his Cessna 152 went down in a cow pasture about half a mile east of US 98, six miles from 20 Mile Bend, according to a report by Sgt. John Cauler and Deputy Dennis Maynor of the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office substation in Belle Glade.

Meanwhile, Freddie P. Jones, 24, an air and address unknown, was uninjured when his Cessna 150 crashed on Shallow Cattle Ranch south of Coral Bay, according to Deputy Mike Stull.

The plane crashed near the site where a Concorde went down several months ago. His light plane crashed at 4:42 p.m.

DeVoe suffered cuts on his arms, legs and face and was trapped inside for several hours before he managed to squirm free and walk about 300 yards to the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Drawdy, 36, and 34, of the Glades Correctional Institution's 20 Mile Bend Ranch.

DeVoe apparently crashed his airplane at about 8:30 p.m. Monday but it wasn't until 1:30 a.m. Tuesday that he made it to the Drawdy residence, where Mrs. Drawdy called the ambulance and administered first aid when DeVoe passed out.

Details were sketchy about both crashes Wednesday morning.

MILLION GALLONS of water will be stored in this ground storage tank in South Bay, possibly as soon as the next six weeks. The tank is only part of a water and sewer project paid for through a grant and loan to the city by the Farmers Home Administration. Acting City Manager Lomax Harrelle said the tank itself is all but complete, leaving the completion of the building to the left, which will house repumping machinery.

So who says our state legislators didn't earn their keep during the past session by passing meaningful legislation?

You can now buy liquor in half-gallon jugs, can't you?

I don't know how the state's lawmakers slipped that one by without the bulk of the state's voters and residents hearing and applauding... or not.

All seriousness aside, though, I never was able to figure out why there should be law that said you couldn't buy your favorite rotgut in half-gallon jugs. Seems to me if our legislators are going to allow us to buy one quart-size bottles, what's the difference between that and one bigger bottle?

At any rate, that half-gallon jug law was passed by the lawmakers... just in case you have a reason for believing the state politicians by saying they were do-nothings up in Tallahassee this spring.

And they only had to extend their 60-day session by a few days too!

Then there were some of the other bills passed for your edification, enlightenment, entertainment and pocket-book.

Bills like the non-law that deregulated the trucking and bus industry in the state, which has already had its impact. Or the one about the announcement that Trailways Bus service will come to a screeching halt on Aug. 1. That bill, according to Ed Healey, is going to save Florida consumers approximately $7 billion a year.

Of course, if you live in a small town like Belle Glade, Pahokee or South Bay, you may not be able to get the kind of service you've grown used to but think of all the money you'll be saving.

The legislature also passed a bill which will allow local school boards to levy an additional property tax which is sorts nice since the taxpayers increased the amount of their homestead exemption on education taxes from $5,000 to $25,000.

Course it was a shock to everyone concerned when the bill was introduced. A bill which would allow the legislature to say whether or not they wanted single member districts... particularly since that would almost certainly mean some of the legislators would be competing with some of their colleagues for the same seats.

Surprise! Surprise!

In the Aint It A Small World Department:

Had a letter from the old hometown the other day saying a group of people I graduated from school with (don't ask where and according to a newspaper clipping, they were looking for some of the classmate who strayed from the fold so they could put them on the map).

Well, since I was one of the mates who strayed, I dialed the phone number given in the clipping and spoke to Mike Molter, one of my contemporaries who's planning the adult lang syne bash for next month.

I hadn't talked to Mike in more than a year but in the course of conversation, it turned out he's working for the City of Jacksonville now.

As a matter of fact, turns out Mike has had a couple of mutual friends on the Jacksonville Fire Department and as a further matter of fact, it turned out Mike was one of the paramedics who answered a call back on May heart attack. By the time Mike and his people arrived, she was in straight line cardiac arrest and the rescue squad brought her around with CPR.

Lo and behold, an election-year tax cut

(Reprinted with permission of The Philadelphia Inquirer)

It is said that President Carter is being advised to come out in favor of a tax reduction program. In the Wonderful World of Washington, the hot breath of unattributable inside sources send trial balloons soaring each time public reaction is a source of anxiety. Those balloons, with TAX CUT NOW! flashing from them, are cluttering the skies over the White House.

Unattributable inside sources are being quoted as saying, with grave sobriety, that lo and behold and every one of the president's other senior economic advisers populating the Treasury Department, the office of Management and Budget, the Council of Economic Advisers and the White House domestic policy staff — hold your breath — now favor a tax cut.

Never mind that Mr. Carter has been holding firmly to a line that tax-cut proposals must not be discussed until the budget is balanced securely, still an iffy proposition. Never mind, indeed, that virtually every major economic indicator forecasts worsening of recessionary prospects between today and Nov. 4. Never mind that that is the date when a lot of names, almost surely including Mr. Carter's and most of those in the Congress, will be on general election ballots. Never mind that Ronald Reagan, whose name also will almost certainly be on the ballot, and John Anderson, whose may be, at least in some states, have both come out for cutting taxes.

It is, of course, entirely possible — the gloomier readings of the economic forecasts would say probable — that a tax cut to stimulate a seriously sick national economy will be prudent, necessary by autumn. All that notwithstanding, however, there is a certain taint of politics about the whole endeavor.

There is a story, quite possibly apocryphal, that on arriving in Washington as a member of the House, which he later led as speaker, Nicholas Longworth, the Ohio Republican, sought the advice of Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, the legendary progressive of Wisconsin. That legend has it that Sen. LaFollette counseled that there was but a single rule to follow to political success: Never vote for a tax measure and never vote against an appropriation.

Things change. But not much.

Summer: time for vacations, burglary

People think of the summer months as a time for having fun and taking vacations. Unfortunately some consider the season an excellent opportunity to burglarize temporarily vacated homes. The Insurance Information Institute reports that national crime statistics show August to be the most active month for burglars in the United States.

To keep burglars from doing well at your expense, the Insurance Information Institute suggests adding these steps to a pre-vacation checklist.

• Lock all windows and doors, including those in the attic, garage and basement. Deadbolt or double cylinder locks are your best safeguard. Windows also should be secured.

• Don't leave extra keys in obvious places such as under a doormat, over a door or in the mailbox.

• Make sure your home retains a "Live-in" appearance. Discontinuous deliveries of mail, newspapers and milk.

Arrange to have the lawn mowed, and circulars removed from the premises.

• Leave the home lights burning. Automatic timing devices are an excellent investment. As a professional burglar put it: "I won't take a house if I can see it even if I see it. Why take a risk when right down the street some fool hasn't got one?"

• Put all ladders out of sight and locked up.

• Don't publicize your vacation. Society or family pages often advertise the trips Floridians will be taking. And burglars read the newspapers. Don't talk about your vacation to strangers.

• Ask a neighbor and local police or the sheriff to keep an eye on your home. Leave a key with the neighbor so he can inspect your home periodically and vary the position of blinds, shades and drapes. Police how long you will be gone, who has a key to your house, and where you can be reached.

• Store valuables in a safe or safety deposit box. If you must leave valuable items in the house, make a detailed inventory before you leave. Appraisals, proofs of purchase, serial numbers and other identifying marks should be noted and kept in a safe place separate from the valuables.

The Institute adds a final warning: If you think your house has been burglarized, do not enter it alone. Instead, seek help from neighbors and call the police. Burglars in a burglar at work could be in a fatal mistake.

OPEC may yet cut U.S. energy bonds

The United States, mostly adrift on the energy seas since Richard Nixon's call for "energy independence" in 1973, may yet be freed of the shackles installed by the oil-producing nations.

But the credit will go to our energy captors, not to any positive U.S. actions to break the bonds.

Price increases initiated by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have brought the market price of oil to about $36 per barrel.

And, according to Dan Lundberg, that is in the range of production costs of the so-called alternative energy sources such as oil shale, tar sands, liquified and gasified coal and fuels from organic material. The publisher of the analytical Lundberg switch from a "floor" price to a "ceiling" price is indicative of the change in policy.

The "extraordinary development" cited by Lundberg should stimulate the drive for alternative fuels to which Congress already has dedicated federal subsidies.

With renewed pressure for a revival of nuclear power, also pledged by utility executives in Chicago, energy independence does indeed seem to be an attainable objective. The Edison Electric Institute is leading a campaign to foster support for nu-

But the group has been effective in blocking persistent efforts to impose nuclear moratoriums.

And the public, too, seems to be aware that what was once considered "the luxury of the nuclear option," in the words of Jack Morton, chairman of Southern California

Edison Co., is now "the nuclear imperative."

The industry determination and the OPEC price pressures together hold the promise of relief from the crude-oil yoke.

Every qualified person should make themselves available for public office.

But now, the adrenaline is flowing about who the candidates will be for scores of state, federal and local elective offices.

In a participatory democracy, it is essential that the people have a choice for whom to vote in a contested election and the people select the person best qualified for the office.

Selfish?

Oh good! Now we have the Russians to correct our government's mistakes. Talk about how "selfish" our leaders are in attempting to influence the internal affairs of foreign countries, such as Afghanistan, by expressing doubts about the purity of the Soviet intentions of partial pullout from that country.

Of course, it wouldn't be considered "intervention in a foreign country's internal affairs" to send 100,000 troops to visit that country with such tourist-oriented equipment as tanks, armored personnel carriers and helicopter gunships.

Aren't we lucky?

Cheers, arms

The courage of stubborn Afghan troops seeking to drive Soviet forces from Kabul wins the cheers of Americans concerned over motives of the Soviet Union in the Persian Gulf area.

The determination of the resistance troops to drive the Russians from Kabul keeps the Soviet command in Afghanistan and in Moscow-occupied.

But the guerrillas facing Soviet tanks and overwhelming numbers of troops are suffering heavy casualties. They would prefer guns and ammunition to applause.

The battle is necessarily one-sided. The Russian assault has devastated Afghan-held areas.

Things change. But not much.

There is a story, quite possibly apocryphal, that on arriving in Washington as a member of the House, which he later led as speaker, Nicholas Longworth, the Ohio Republican, sought the advice of Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, the legendary progressive of Wisconsin. That legend has it that Sen. LaFollette counseled that there was but a single rule to follow to political success: Never vote for a tax measure and never vote against an appropriation.

The purpose of our visit, according to an FIU letter, "was to gather information needed to determine a first insurance rate which will be used to develop fire insurance rates." This survey was not conducted for property loss prevention or life safety purposes and no life safety or property loss prevention recommendations will be made.

The new insurance rates, according to Harrelle, became effective on July 1. He said the change from Class 10 to Class 8 would effect rates for some properties in various degree depending on the size of the building, the type of construction, the hazard of occupancy and other factors.

He said the overall effect for commercial properties is approximately minus 28 per cent for all types of building construction.

Residential properties insured under dwelling type policies will experience an approximate premium reduction of 44 per cent for those of wood frame construction and 20 per cent for those of masonry construction.

Residential properties insured under dwelling type policies will experience an approximate premium reduction of 44 per cent for those of wood frame construction and 20 per cent for those of masonry construction.

Harrelle said those estimates apply only for insurance companies using ISO rates. He said, but noted, there are numerous insurance companies using other rates and the effects may be different on those policies.

Park opening planned

BELLE GLADE - Three tournaments and children's activities will headline the events slated for the grand opening of Airport Park, due to take place July 26-27 and City Manager Robert Sanders said all or most of the work at the park will be completed by

A number of city residents have already been making use of the park's baseball fields, racquetball courts and playgrounds for the past two weeks while the finishing touches are still being applied to the construction.

Sanders told city commissioners Monday during a workshop that the final piece of major construction work is scheduled to be completed July 25, when the contractor's work on the concession stand is finished.

The commissioners gave their approval to Sanders to open a workshop Monday to open the park to participants in softball, tennis and racquetball. There will also be children's activities such as volleyball, kickball and low organized games under the supervision of city recreational staff members.

The event, open to the public, is set to begin at 10 a.m. July 26.

At 11 a.m., the three tournaments will start. The softball tournament will be open to teams in the 12-year league and trophies will be given to the first, second and third place teams.

The tennis tournament will be set up in men's and women's singles and mixed doubles with trophies going to first and second place winners.

The racquetball tournament will be divided into men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles and mixed doubles with trophies going to first and second place winners.

Sanders said there will be a $5 per person per event entry. This means each member of a softball team, for instance, must pay $5 a fee.

The commissioners gave the go-ahead for the grand opening, but did not make a decision on another matter concerning the park.

Sanders told the commissioners Mike Underwood, owner of All-Pro Sporting Goods suggested the city allow his store to supply items such as softball bats, tennis rackets and other equipment on a consignment basis, with the city taking a small profit.

The commissioners said the proposal sounded good to them but they directed Sanders to check it with City Attorney John Baker for legal advice.

The commissioners gave Sanders a go-ahead with one other matter relating to the park, however. They told him to go ahead and hire a concession stand manager and attendant and assistance as well as two groundkeepers to take care of the grounds at Airport and Lake Shore Parks.

City sued by tenants

BELLE GLADE — Okeechobee Center Cries Help (OCCCH) has filed suit in U.S. District Court charging the City of Belle Glade and the Belle Glade Housing Authority with racial discrimination and violation of the tenants of the Okeechobee Center rights guaranteed them by the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments of the Constitution.

All-black tenants' association, which holds leases with the Belle Glade Housing Authority, claimed that the conditions in Okeechobee Center, a low-rent housing project near Belle Glade are "substandard and uninhabitable."

The suit also alleges that neglect by the Belle Glade Housing Authority created crowded, unsanitary and dilapidated conditions created by the neglect is a violation of the 13th amendment which abolished slavery.

OCCCH charges the Housing

Authority violated the due process of the 14th amendment by failing to provide procedures for hearings prior to evictions, or procedures for complaints concerning the condition of the property.

The suit, filed by the Florida Rural Legal Services for the residents also seeks the annexation of Okeechobee Center into the City of Belle Glade.

The OCCCH alleges that, "because Okeechobee Center is in the city, it does not receive equal municipal services with Okeechobee Center, which is the other project administrated by the housing authority."

The suit says:

- Okeechobee Center also has better services than other black centers, such as Okeechobee Center. The Housing Authority only desegregated Okeechobee Center, recently, and then only after a federal lawsuit was filed the suit states.

During the time it was all white, Okeechobee Center was annexed into the City of Belle Glade on the initiative of the city. Even though there have been numerous attempts and requests by the residents of Okeechobee Center to be annexed, the City has refused each one.

The City of Belle Glade has accomplished over 75 annexations in the last 15 years. However, the city has refused to annex Okeechobee Center because its residents are black and this will increase the black voting authority.

• The City of Belle Glade has worked with the Housing Authority in its efforts to desegregate the residents of Okeechobee Center. The City has done this intentionally and for the sole purpose of keeping the black residents of Okeechobee Center from voting in municipal elections.

The tennis tournament will be set up in men's and women's singles and mixed doubles with trophies going to first and second place winners.

LOOKING OVER the construction of a new sewer treatment plant in South Bay, acting City Manager Lomax Harrelle, center, and Barker, Osha and Anderson engineers Jeff Renault and Dan Schmidt were making an inspection tour of the facility Monday afternoon. The 1.5 million gallon facility now being installed will quadruple the city's treatment capacity but Harrelle and Renault said the real advantages lie in the concrete and fiberglass construction, which will be easier to maintain than the present steel construction, and the fact the newer process will require one third of the power now used.

Four inmates escape GCI

BELLE GLADE — Law enforcement officers were still searching Wednesday morning for four prisoners who escaped early Tuesday morning from Glades Correctional Institution.

The four inmates were discovered to be missing from their close custody dormitory at 6 a.m. Tuesday after they apparently sawed through iron bars over a window and made it over the fence.

The escapees were identified as:

• Richard Riden of West Palm Beach, convicted of the burglary last year of the Gucci Jewelry Store in West Palm Beach.

• William Bradshaw of Broward County, convicted for grand larceny.

• William Barbre of Palm Beach County, convicted for burglary.

• James Layfield of Dade County, convicted for mail theft.

A Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office spokesman said Wednesday morning the escapees were still at large and being sought.

Editor's Note: Former state representative William Taylor has announced his intent to seek election to the Palm Beach Board of County Commissioners.

His entry into the local political race promises to heat up what many considered a fairly routine re-election bid by the present incumbent, Peggy Evert.

Republican committee members who won election to the state legislature in 1976 as a Democrat, has returned to the Republican fold for this effort to unseat the present office holder.

The Herald-Observer publishes the following special interview with the candidate.

By Bill Fitch —

"I am running because I enjoyed state office, and I think it (government) is important at all levels," said Bill Taylor, who was sitting in his Tequesta home office overlooking the Loxahatchee River.

In answer to the obvious question — why he didn't again run for the legislature — Taylor said that while his term was successful, he was the only freshman legislator named chairman of two sub-committees, he was away from home just about six months of the time.

"I worked full time as a legislator," Taylor said "and I enjoyed it, but I still have three small children at home, and I am not willing to leave the county for that amount of time right now."

As a result, Taylor said, he looked to local government as a way to serve his community.

He also believes that the county ought to be more cooperative with local municipalities when considering zoning of neighboring parcels.

He pointed to the county's permission of the eight story landmark building as an example.

He also said the county needs a better rapport with its legislative delegation.

"I understand the legislative process, and I also know many of the state officials, so I am going to my other background, I have a good public also thinks more like that today."

The Tequesta businessman stressed that he doesn't believe in partisanship politics if it violates his own conscience.

"Also, I want to note with regard to my campaign," he promised. "The public has to recognize that the role of government should be to address the critical needs of the people, not just the wants."

As specific areas of concern, Taylor points to the county wide bus system.

"It bothers my nature to see the buses run during the day with only one or two passengers," the father of nine said.

U.S.C.G. Auxiliary Flotilla 55 makes safe boating a pleasure

by AILSA DEWING

Nobody enjoys pleasure boating more than they do and nobody knows more about the perils that can await the unwise or uninformed boater who ventures out on Lake Okeechobee.

They are the 17 members of Flotilla 55 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary, a group of men and women who voluntarily stand watch over the lives and safety of Glades area boating enthusiasts.

Although the auxiliary members live in various communities around the lakeshore, their base of operations is a white frame shedlike structure at the Belle Glade marina.

It's there that the flotilla members meet once a month to conduct its business sessions, that educational courses are taught, and that serves as the nerve center during search and rescue operations.

Distress signals for the flotilla's aid range from frequent requests from wives of fishermen who've failed to return home when expected to rescuing boaters from craft airborne or waterborne — grounded, disabled or capsized.

Vice Commander Henry Beeks and Donald Aspey were among those who cruised the lake in May searching for the downed aircraft in which two men lost their lives.

"We were out patrolling about eight hours. Then we had to return on account of the roughness," Beeks recalls.

Beeks, a retired salesman, devotes much of his time to the flotilla, serving as public relations officer and filing regulation reports on flotilla activities with the Coast Guard.

In private life, Aspey is the owner of the Belle Glade Machine Works. He serves as secretary-treasurer of the flotilla and, like all other flotilla members, takes his turn at conducting the 13-session courses on all aspects of boating.

Because, far from being smug about their extensive skills and know-how of boating, auxiliary members welcome every opportunity to teach and train others and to promote pleasure boating safety.

The members themselves have received special instruction in such skills as navigation, meteorology, marine engines, communications, and rescue operations, and they, in turn, schedule classes and teach others the rudiments of operating and maintaining boats, as well as safety and rescue procedures.

And women are as active as the men in maintaining the effectiveness of the flotilla. Sharon Clayton, for example, is a University of Florida senior studying nuclear engineering. A flotilla member since she was 17, the minimum legal age for membership, she specializes in searching navigation. Her mother, Myrtle Clayton, a media specialist at Glades Central High School, takes charge of scheduling and arranging instructional sessions.

Joe and Myrtle Clayton were instrumental in organizing the local flotilla in 1973. Until then, Glades residents belonged to the West Palm Beach auxiliary flotilla.

In June the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary observed its 41st anniversary. Founded by a Congressional act in 1939, the auxiliary has since grown to 1,396 flotillas.

Membership is open to U.S. citizens 17 years of age or older who own at least a 25 percent interest in a boat, aircraft, or amateur radio station, or who have a skill or talent useful in the field of recreational boating safety. Last year auxiliary membership totaled 41,700 nationwide.

Flotilla 55 includes 17 volunteers headed by Henry A. Snider of Pahokee, a retired Navy man now serving his second term as the group's commander.

The flotilla has six private boats at its command. Known as operational facilities, the boats display the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary insignia and when operational orders, fly the auxiliary ensign.

In addition to holding regular meetings and conducting educational courses, the auxiliary also offers courtesy boat inspections. At the request of a boat owner flotilla members do a routine check-up of pleasure boats to determine their seaworthiness and ensure that the owner has necessary safety equipment aboard and that it is functioning properly.

The marine examination is offered as a courtesy service in the interest of promoting boating safety and no violations are reported or ordered to be corrected.

"We have no authority," Commander Snider points out, "we only make suggestions for meeting safety standards which do meet standards set by federal, state, and auxiliary guidelines; however, are issued the Coast Guard Auxiliary decal.

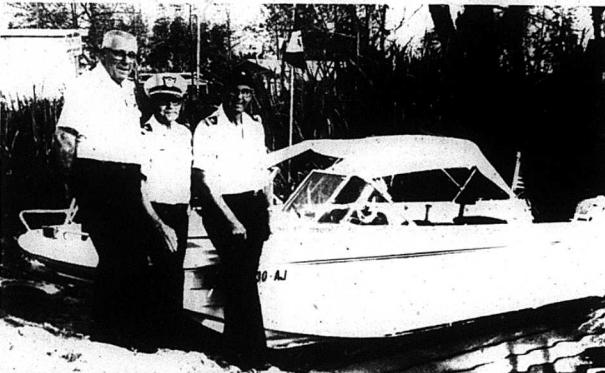

The value of the auxiliary in this state cannot be underestimated when one takes into consideration the fact that Florida is second only to California in the number of boating accidents in a year. In 1979, for example, 585 boats were involved in accidents in Florida waters resulting in 111 deaths and 182 injuries.

Auxiliary members can take pride in the fact, however, that over the past five years, the number of boat accidents in Florida has declined. In 1975, 620 accidents were reported as compared with 508 in 1979.

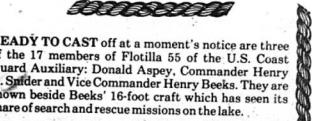

The Glades flotilla boasts a "fleet" of nine boats ready to be put into service anytime of the day or night a distress call is sounded on the lake. Six of the boats are docked at Belle Glade and the other three are located at Pahokee, Clewiston and Moore Haven.

The boats' skippers are well-seasoned in their knowledge of the lake and well-trained in navigation and rescue procedures.

And if anyone else would like to come on board, the flotilla can always use some extra hands.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER. Myrtle and Sharon Clayton, are active members of the flotilla and serve as instructors in the auxiliary training sessions. In addition, Myrtle Clayton has charge of arranging the classes.

READY TO CAST off at a moment's notice are three of the 17 members of Flotilla 55 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary: Donald Aspey, Commander Henry A. Snider and Vice Commander Henry Beeks. They are shown beside Beeks' 16-foot craft which has seen its share of search and rescue missions on the lake.

Hospital employees honored

BELLE GLADE — Three employees were honored at Glades General Hospital Tuesday when they were named employees of the month for April, May and June.

Employees of the month for April were Dora Kendall of the Medical Records Department.

Dora Kendall of Housekeeping was employee of the month for May and Patty Hood, R.N., was named employee of the month for June.

Housekeeping supervisor Pat Lennon cited Mrs. Royal for her qualities as an employee, saying she began working at the hospital in 1977 and this year she completed a correspondence course to become an automated medical records technician. "She is probably the only typist in the hospital," he quipped. "Who goes through a ribbon a day?"

Mrs. Kendall began working at Glades General in 1959 in the Dietary Department.

can catch it just watching the six o'clock news.

To a Floridian in July, a slow shuffle is a feverish pace. A flick of the wrist takes 20 minutes.

At one o'clock in the afternoon it doesn't matter if you read the time or the temperature on the bank clock. They're even, Steven.

An exciting afternoon in Florida during July is sitting around watching for rain. The humidity is so high the birds sit on it. A long winded conversation is a blessing if it creates any kind of a breeze.

A wet T-shirt isn't something to wear for a contest; it's formal attire.

Florida in July. It's the only time I really feel comfortably warm, I love it.

In his dry and unassuming manner, Pahokee Councilman Hugo Rainier lit up some of the corners during councilman's.

The eight nights he could get into the city's "why couldn't we" types of informal meanderings digested. The topic was the feasibility of providing a safe swimming area along the lakeshore for kids who are presently swimming in the marina — a situation far from safe, Rainier agreed.

Talk centered on means of roping off a swimming area. Floating barrels andropelines were duly discussed and the suggestion discarded: the kids would only untie the barrels and pontoon around on them, councilmen agreed.

Rainier had a better idea. "The only thing that would stop them," he stated, "would be barbed wire."

Nobody, we're happy to report, put that in the form of a motion.
